GLUES TO MURDER FAIL

(Continued From Page 1)

is reported to have gotten a job on a pile driver and went west from Creston.

Want to Investigate Case

There have been many detectives seeking the privilege of investigating the case, some addressing the relatives, others the authorities, one or the other, in charge. These letters and telegrams are not replied to, as a general rule.

Marshal J. H. Horton got a telegram Thursday from a man by the name of Ed. T. Egan, of Tulsa, Oklahoma, the telegram reading as follows:

"To the Chief of Police,

"Villisca, Iowa.

"Relative of the Joseph Moore murder, will investigate case if so desired. Answer."

The message was somewhat ambiguous, and at first it was thought to mean that Egan is a relative of J. B. Moore or of the other Joseph Moore here, but an inquiry disproved this. Marshal Horton is inclined to believe Egan is a detective of some kind who would like to take up an investigation and that the word "Relative," simply means "Regarding the murder, etc" The telegram was not replied to.

Finger Print Expert Leaves

Following in the footsteps of the other detectives M. W. McClaughry of Leavenworth, Kansas, who had been summoned by County Attorney W. C. Ratcliff to investigate the finger print evidence, if any might develop, left the city Thursday. He would make no statement of his progress, but expressed the opinion that it was some one thoroughly familiar with the premises, and that the two girls down stairs were killed first He thought that if Mr. and Mrs. Moore had been the first victims, the vibration of the house would have awakened the sleeping children downstairs. Photographs of the murderer's ax, and of the lamp chimney found under the dresser down stairs, were taken at Mr. McClaughry's request in the hopes that a record might be made of the finger prints thereon, but the prints were not conspicious enough to be photographed very satifactorily. John Hayes of Kansas City, who had been called to assist Mr. McClaughry, was in the city for a short time Wednesday evening, but did not remain on the field. Dan O'Leary of the John Hayes' agency, and L. W Longneeker of Omaha, the former hired by the county officials and the latter by the citizens, will continue their investigations indefinitely. Mr. Longnecker is assisted by C. Worley,

A Pinkerton man by the name of Gillson, with headquarters at Kansas City, was in Omaha soon after the murder and wired County Attorney Ratcliff to meet him at Villisca. He made an investigation of the case Saturday night and Sunday morning, and stated that he believed there was some connection between the crimes committed at Villisca and those of Monmouth, Illinois, Ellsworth and Paola, Kansas, and Colorado Springs, Colorado. Mr. Gillson was not retained on the case and he left the city Sunday noon.

J. M. Harrison of Chariton, Iowa, special agent for the Burlington, with whom he has been associated for thirty-eight years, and Sheriff W. D. Griffin of Albia, Monroe county, president of the State association of sheriffs, arrived in Villisca Thursday evening on No. 9, and began an investigation of the crime.

There is some talk that the Hearst newspapers will be asked to take up the inquiry in the cause of humanity, but the authorities at Villisca have nothing to say concerning this. The Hearst papers have employed the famous Burns detective agency in a number of instances and might be induced to do so again, if they were appealed to.

The sheriff from Colorado Springs was in Villisca Saturday night, examined the premises where the atrocious deed was committed, and otherwise made a thorough investigation of the case. He stated that the crimes were committed much after the same fashion, and that very likely were the work of one man, or that some man who had studied the Colorado, Illinois and Kansas crimes did the job at Villisca.

Horton Gets Mysterious Letter

Of the many peculiar developments of the case, none was of a more mysterious import than that of a letter sent to Marshal J. H. Horton on Thursday. The missive was signed by Stephen. R. Moore of Kenkakee, Illinois, Moore claiming to be a lawyer of 55 years' practice. His advice to the authorities here was to look for a negro, with a twisted wrist, a shrewd cunning fellow, and a gambler, and that, finding him, they would have the murderer. The authorities were inclined to believe he is some kind of fanatic, but proceeded to give the matter their closest attention.

A reply was sent to Moore by mail, and the sheriff at Kankakee wa wired to keep a watch to see who got the reply.

The letter received by Mr. Horton wa as follows:

"Kankakee, Ill., June 11, 1912.

"To the Sheriff at Villisca, Iowa:

"I read your tragedy. While you will not cease to pursue your theory of the crime, I beg to suggest as follows: Make inquiry if a colored man, a stranger, has been in your city, a man of marked appearance, easy address, a gambler, very cunning. He is easily identified by this fact. He has a crooked wrist which makes his hand quite stiff. He associates with colored people. If your place is a small villiage, and probably not much of a negro settlement, he would stay in some larger place in easy reach of his victims. Such neighboring cities should be investigated. If any negro has been n any places near to this crime, I will have many things to say to you. If no such negro has been seen, no harm is done.

"we had a family in this county destroyed just in the manner your family was destroyed—knocked in the head with an ax. This colored man murdered them. He makes a business of killing families. 'He is not insane. He frequently comes to Chicago and stays around the 22nd street negro settlement. Ordinarily he moves around the mines and miners near Pittsburg. He will kill a family as easily as he would kill a nest of rats.

"I am a lawyer; been in practice here 55 years. It will not cost anything to learn if a negro as I describe has been at or near your place. If such a negro has been there, I will tell you who killed this family. Yours truly,

"Stephen R. Moore."

Chief of Police W. W. Exline, of Creston, wrote to Moore intimating that such a negro as he described was ur der surveillanee, and Moore wired back: "Mailed letter. Do not let this person get out of sight. If gone can be found in Chicago by tomorrow.' The telegram was received by Marshal Horton Saturday afternoon, and on Sunday he got the following letter from Moore:

Second Letter From Moore

"Kankakee, Ill., June 14, 1912

"Mr. J. H. Horton,

"Villisca, Iowa.

"Dear Sir:

"Letter received. Do not fail to keep a man on the trail of that person. I have no doubt he is the man you want. I can't write in detail what you must know. Will meet you in Chicago or here and put you in possession of a marvelous statement in details. There can be no mistaking the man, if he has this crooked arm, and his operations are identical with his ordinary manner of operating in the commission of such crimes. Better tell me what you desire to be done.

"STEPHEN R. MOORE."

Detective Longnecker went to Omaha Sunday evening and has a negro with a crooked wrist under surveillance. He is described as copper colored, of the Alabama type, and wearing a light cap. Two negroes who were seen in Villisca Sunday evening before the murder were traced as having taken a west bound freight at the Lane Cut in the west part of Omaha.

Many Fanatic Letters

Every day's mail brings to the authorities in charge of the case some new fanatical letter, or some new theory propounded, and to investigate them all is well nigh impossible. One fellow up at Mt. Ayr, who claims to have "immense wisdom if he could get a medium through which to use it," although admitting that he is "set down on as a back number," wrote too "the Sherriff at Valiska, Iowa," as follows:

"Mt Ayr Iowa June 15 1912.

"Hon Sherriff at ValiskaIowa Dear Sir there is now telling what a little thing means sometimes I have A way of putting A feller in A trance and finding out wond-erfull things Sometimes I piet up a boy to look after your Murder and he Saw the Scene all right Saw the dogs track him to the river he Laughed why he is gone down the river in a boat about 3½ miles run his boat too shore left it go went through the fields for Conway there took A train he could trace him any farther.

"If I had a subject I could get any information that I want I am her Now Money Set down on as A back No. yet have amence wisdom if I could get the medium through which I could use it "My Boy Said it don't Seam plain to me I will not go any farther

"your friend

"FRANCIS ELLIS"

A begrimed card, inscribed "Prof. Francis Ellis, Magnetic Healer, Mt. Ayr, Iowa," was enclosed with the letter, the professor having originally been at Mt. Pleasant, the word "Pleasant" being crossed out with ink and the word "Ayr" written in.

Somebody ought certainly to take advantage of the professor's "amence" wisdom.

Why Not Pray? Asks One

Another letter whose writer denies being a "crank," suggests that prayer be made the means of finding the murderer. The writer, E. T. Elliott, of Hawarden, Iowa, says:

"To the Mayor:

"Dear Sir: There are in your city many who sincerely believe in the power of prayer. Why don't they use it to solve the murder mystery? Not that prayer would lead to the direct action of God but the consentient act of the suppliants will by suggestion so act upon the mind of the murderer if living as to lead to confession or unconscious betrayal—if dead will lead by the chain of events to discovery.

"The suppliants should have in mind the scene of the crime and details so far as known.

"This is not the theory of a crank, but of a student for many years of telepathic suggestion."

This Man is Dangerous

On Friday afternoon a new and rather serious aspect was cast over the grim proceedings of the week, when Harlan Burge, a farmer living near Gravity in Taylor county, called on Mayor F. L. Ingman and told a story of receiving threatening letters from a John H. Bohlen, who worked for Mr. Burge some four years ago during harvest time. Mr. Burge's story is to the effect that last January the man drove up to his place in company with another fellow in a buggy, and asked Burge if he knew him. Burge replied that he did not, and Bohlen reminded him of the time when he (Bohlen) worked for Burge. Then he asked Burge why he had been trying to hypnotize him, and Burge denied having ever attempted any such ridiculous proceedings. Bohlen wanted to know why Burge had it in for him, and Burge told him he cherished nothing but the best of regards towards him, whereupon Bohlen waived his hand and said, "All right, I'll see you later."

Nothing more came of it until last month, when Bohlen wrote a letter of forty pages to Burge, in which he rambled away in a religous strain, much after the fashion certain parts of the Bible are written. He said the death of a relative had prompted him to pray, something he had not done in five years, and that he went to a temple and out of the east door of the temple a stream of water flowed past the Garden of Paradise, and that in the garden were all kinds of fruits good to eat, and that three men in white approached him, and one of them set upon his forehead the mark of the righteous, stating that all who had not such mark should be slain, and in this fashion he rambled on through two letters.

Detective O'Leary went to Nebraska City last Saturday to find some trace of the man, who gave no address other than general delivery.

Here's One Received In Kansas

Sheriff R.W. Bradshaw of Ellsworth, Kansas, wrote to Sheriff O. E. Jackson of Montgomery county saying that it would be a wise plan to save all fanatical letters and he sent a copy of one he had received from some crank which was given to some newspaper reporter and afterwards misplaced. The letter was as follows:

"Sorry you students of crime are puzzled about ax men according to Mathew 3rd chapter 10th verse and Josiah 9th chapter and 24th verse the ax users viz, the Gideonites are inhabitants of Lincoln, Nebraska, and surroundings of the country and of the same city. If you will follow my advise examine all Nebraska people living in your city and if you fail to find the ax men I may write again. Be sure and do what I am telling you and you will find your man. The above is a prophecy went into force since 1911, May the 18th, and it will continue Axmen for 4 years—after 4 years, then the criminals will use fire to destroy human life. Yours For Humanity and God

"Masar Shallall Rash Bass."

A report was current in Villisca Saturday that in all the towns where the ax man had comitted his terrible crime there had been some kind of religious meetings held. and such was true in the case of Villisca and that of Colorado Springs, but at Paola and Ellsworth Kansas. and at Monmouth, Illinois, nothing of the kind occurred, according to telegrams to The Review from the leading newspapers of those towns.

It was further reported on Monday that Tiele, the man who murdered his wife in Villisca some twelve years ago, had escaped from the penitentiary, and that J. B. Moore had sat on the jury which convicted him, and that possibly Tiele, in seeking revenge, had comitted the dastardly crime of Sunday night, but this story was found to be utterly without foundation, as was another to the effect that J. B. Moore had identified a knife about seven years ago which resulted in the conviction of Joe Briggs of Page county, and that Briggs. who was released a month ago had sworn revenge on Mr. Moore.

There was a report in Red Oak Tuesday morning that the murderer had been found in an attic at the Moore home, but the story was a pure fabrication.

A Clue Worth While

Out of all the jumble and gossip it has been well nigh impossible to find a clue really worth while, but about the nearest approach to one was that which came from Clarinda Monday. W. M. Grimes, a truck farmer living 2½ miles east of Clarinda, reported having seen a negro on a bicycle riding east past his farm Monday morning about half past eleven o'clock, and the negro, who seemed to be in a great hurry, was sweating profusely. Grimes hailed him, and said: "You're in a pretty big hurry, aint you?" But the negro refused to answer, and Grimes again ask him if he wasn't getting pretty warm, but again received no reply. The negro had gotten off his wheel to go up a little hill, but he jumped on again and dashed off as though he wanted to get away from something or somebody. A young lady named Nannie Cummings also saw the man, as did a young man by the name of Ackerman. The man is described as not entirely black, wearing a dark, heavy coat and light colored trousers. The sheriff of Page county is investigating the clue.

Had Sack of Clothes

Miss Fay Van Gilder received a letter from a man by the name of M. E. Thompson of Salem, South Dakota, Tuesday in which Thompson states that a suspicious looking character called at their place, asking for something to eat and when he was refused went away swearing. He carried a flour sack in which was old clothing, Mr. Thompson thought.

A bloody jacket found in the Arbuckle Bros.' slaughter house by E. H. Landers and Lee Van Gilder was thought to have some bearing on the case until George Neely identified it as belonging to Lewis Elick, who butchered for Arbuckle Bros. last winter.

Delegation of Officials and Newspaper Men Covering the Tragedy.

Reading from left to right they are: 1City Marshal J. H. Horton, 2G. Carleton of the Stanton Ca.l; 3Dr. I. E. Wallin of Stanton assistant to the coroner; 4Coroner A. L. Linquist; 5R. T. Robarts of the Des Moines Capital; 6M. W. McClaughry, special agent in charge of the department of justice bureau of criminal identification, U. S. Federal Prison, Leavenworth, Kansas; 7Sheriff O. E. Jackson of Red Oak, 8W. J. Hobin of the Kansas City Post; 9F. E. Ackerman, of the Omaha News and the United Press of Omaha; 10Edgar Markham of the Des Moines Register and Leader; 11V. B. Smith of the Omaha World-Herald; 12E. L. C. White of the Villisca Review, representing the associated press; 13County Attorney W. C. Ratcliff; and 14J. M. Johnson, official stenographer coroner's jury, Council Bluffs, Iowa. In addition other newspaper men in the city were: W. E. Wells of the Red Oak Express, Frank and Karl Boll of the Red Oak Sun; C. L. Thompson of the St. Joseph News-Press; G. R. Bloodgood, of the Council Bluffs Nonpareil; Ed Leonard of the St. Louis Star; E. C McCarthy of the Elliott Graphic; C. A. Lisle of the Clarinda Herald and others.

$3,500 REWARD

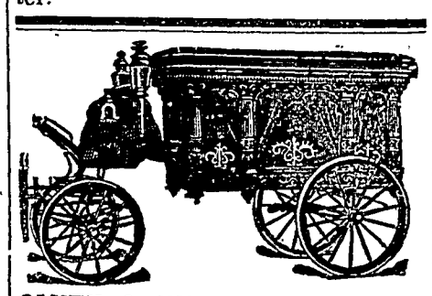

For the arrest and conviction of the murderer or murderers of J. B. Moore and family and Lena and Ina Stillinger at Villisca on the night of Sunday, June 9, 1912, the state of Iowa, Montgomery county, citizens of the city of Villisca, and the adjoining community offer a reward approximating $3,500.

By authority of the governor the state of Iowa has offered $500 for each murderer taken dead or alive, the county has offered $500, and citizens of Villisca have increased the amount by over $1,000.

Mr. and Mrs. John Montgomery, parents of Mrs. Moore, offer a reward of $250, Mrs. C. C. Moore, mother of J. B. Moore, offers a reward of $250 and Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Stillinger, parents of Lena and Ina Stillinger, offer a reward of $500 for the arrest and conviction of the murderer. Through the instrumentality of H. D. Wilson of the firm of Wilson & Wenner at Clarinda citizens of that city have subscribed a fund totaling $325 for the apprehension of the slayer of eight, and others are volunteering subsriptions daily. The reward fund to date totals over $3,500.

STANDING REWARD

There is also a reward of $1200 standing for the apprehension of the Monmouth murderers.

SMITH & WALLACE

AND MRS. J. L. SMITH

Undertakers and Licensed Embalmer
J. L. Smith, Funeral Director
All calls receive prompt attention.
Both Bell and Mutual phones at residence and store

CITY IN STATE OF

(Continued From First

road and imagined he was stop their horses.

At another time excitemen when it was reported that Wm. Burns was in the city famous detective failed to m and then came the report tha detective was here, but she other, failed to make herself A woman, representing some order like the Salvation Arm pected of being a detective, b tle lady went on collecting h nocent of the charge preferre her.

Special police were dep patrol the town at night, and day the board of directors of mercial club entered into ne with W. M. Binkley of the Public Service Company fo porary street lighting arra which will likely be in going the last of the week.

City Quieting Down

The city began to take o ual aspect again about Fri newspaper men and detecti the exception of three of th left the city on Thursday, a groups of curious people, w merly had occupied almost available space in the stree menced to dwindle both in number. Only when news of covery of some fresh clue, o rest of some new suspect heard, did the excitement of and Tuesday show symptom turning. By Thursday the pe gan to grow tired; and many who had scarcely slept since edy, went home and got a mu ed rest. The military, compan der Capt. C. J Casey which so much to maintain order community, was released from following the funeral, but we ject to recall at a moment's should an important arrest be

Men on Guard Duty

Tuesday night a special deta Company F. was ordered to re special guard duty in front of hall, where the murdered victi ies were taken, and in front of B. Moore home. Those on duty two at a time, two hours each order named below: Irvin Jon rold Hill, Carleton Beals, Axe son, L. W. Watt, Harry Smith, Brodrick, Dent Green, M. Philip Burnett, Henry Schantz and M Overman.

The extra men subject to cal Byron Patterson, Guy Crum, Gilder.

The men on duty from seven Tuesday evening until after the al Wednesday evening, excep stationed in front of the Moore who were relieved about midni Special Officers, Ray Huey an Overman They were under co of Sergeant Chas. Hill, Se Cnas. Myerhoff and Corpora Raney.

Other men on duty in unifor ing the funeral services were: Kerssen, Carl Carlson, Ransom Don Anderson and Forrest Moo

Bedding Is Destroyed

Under the direction of Marsha Horton the bedding, and its gre burden of human blood, was re from the J. B. Moore home Th afternoon and burned. The po will be given a complete fumi What deposition will be made home it is hard to forecast. Mr. had owned the place 12 years, was completely paid for. The has five rooms and a spacious or kind of summer kitchen on th There is a barn and a good size den patch, and the garden is in ing condition.

Last to See Them Alive

Many touching instances of th ness of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Moore been recalled since their tragic on Sunday night, June 9, 1912. Moore's mother asked that she be allowed to touch her son's ha once after his death, but none relatives were permitted to vie remains. Mr. Moore had been his mother Sunday evening previous to his death, and had his mother a dollar and a ha laughingly bade her "goodby was the last she was ever to see He and his family and the tw linger girls, their guests, were s church by a great many people the very last persons to see them were two boys, Floyd and Watt, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Watt, who walked home wit doomed family from church. Watt boys say there was no lig the Moore home and the place pr ed no uuusual appearance, whe Moore and his family and gues tered it for the night.

Mr. and Mrs. Moore, parents deceased man, Mrs. John Montg the mother of Mrs. Moore, and J. T. Stilliuger. the mother of th girls, are bearing up under the strain of suspense as well as co expected, but in the case of Mrs linger especially, a reaction is for which may prove serious.

NOTICE TO TEACHERS

Teacher's examination will b at the high school in Red Oak 26-27-28.

CLARA L. COWGI