CORONER RESUMES INQUEST

Three Witnesses Examined Tuesday Forenoon but Very Little Light is Thrown on Murder Tragedy—Jury Has Verdict Ready

Coroner A. L. Linquist and his jury, composed of W. A. Lomas, W. R. Finlayson and J. Y. Wickersham, resumed the taking of evidence in the inquest following the tragedy of Sunday night, June 9, on Tuesday forenoon of this week, and three new witnesses were examined, but very little additional light was thrown upon the tragedy. The most important thing developed was from the evidence of J. T. Stillinger, who, upon being recalled to the stand, testified that a man giving the name of "Martin Luther Kellum" came to work for him about Wednesday, May 15, and left Saturday evening, May 18, stating that he thought he would be back. The man is described as being about 25 or 28 years of age, of about medium complexion and about medium height and build, wearing mustache and fairly well dressed. He acted nervous at times and seemed rather anxious to get his mail. On one occasion, Mr. Stillinger stated, he started to go up stairs and got the door leading to the cellar, the two doors being probably eighteen feet apart. Kellum carried a bundle and came from Clarinda where he said he applied for a job with the Clarinda Poultry, Butter and Egg Co. He told Mr. Stillinger that he would have to go to Burlington to get his clothes, and Mr. Stillinger thought it strange he would have to go there for his clothes. He worked for Mr. Stillinger three and one half days and was paid with a check for $5.25, payable to Ed Sandell. The check was made to bearer. Kellum's hands did not appear callused, but he seemed to be familiar with farm work, and took charge of a team of green colts which he seemed to handle very successfully. He did not leave the place but once, and then came to Villisca. Kellum asked if Chris Teeman was living in town now, and an interview with Mr. Teeman later developed the fact that Kellum had married Mr. Teeman's brother's granddaughter, and had lived in Illinois, having worked in a restaurant at Burliugton, Iowa, for some time. Mr. Teeman stated that he knew the man and was surprised that he did not come to see them while here.

Kellum said he had worked in a restaurant six years and claimed to have been down south and out to Denver. His peculiar name caused Mr. Stillinger and family to remark upon it, and they wondered if he was as good a man as his namesake.

Miss Blanche Mary Stillinger

the first called, testified she was 14 years of age, and the sister of Lena and Ina Stillinger who were killed. She said that J. B. Moore phoned to the Stillinger home about six o'clock Sunday night, June 9, and asked if her mother was there. Then he told Miss Blanche that the two girls, Lena and Ina, had intended going to their grandmother's to stay, but that they were going to stay with them and he asked if it would be all right. He was told that it would be, and the next morning Mrs. Stillinger tried to call up she Moore home two or three times, but could get no answer. Miss Blanche testified that her sisters came to town Sunday morning before Sunday school time and that they stayed all day. They had stayed at the Moore home once before, the Friday night before Christmas.

Joseph T. Stillinger

The second witness was Joseph T. Stillinger, the father of the murdered girls, who in answer to certain questions stated that he had a hired man working for him by the name of John Hanna, who had been in his employ since last February. The man before him was named Chas. Geisz, who is now working eight miles north of Red Oak. He had had no trouble of any kind with either of them. Both are married and occupied separate houses on the Stillinger farm. Mr. Stillinger said he first heard of the murder Monday morning about ten o'clock. He could not account for it, and had no suspicions of any kind. He was later recalled to testify concerning the man, "Martin Luther Kellum". He stated that the two families did not visit together except the girls, that he had no objection to his daughters visiting at the Moore home and that their relations were of the very best.

Charles A. Moore

Then ext witness called was a brother to the murdered man, and is 39 years of age. He testified to having worked for his brother, and that on occasions had done the chores for him. He testified that J. B. Moore kept an ax to mash coal with, but he was not certain that the ax found in the house after the murder was that of his brother. He thought likely the head of the ax was the same as he had seen there, but he believed it had a new handle put in. The blade of the ax has a broken corner, which, Mr. Moore thought, was true of the ax belonging to his brother. But he could not positively identify the ax. At the conclusion of the inquest the following verdict was decided upon, and will be returned by the jury:

"We, the jury; find that J. B. Moore aud family and Lena and Ina Stillinger came to their death on the night of Sunday, June 9, 1912, by being struck on the heads by an ax or some sharp instrument in the hands of a person or persons unknown."

TIME EXTENDED THREE DAYS

Judge Wheeler Gives Shaw Until Friday to Produce Cash—Shaw Wires From Brussels That Money Will be Forthcoming Today

Leslie M. Shaw has been heard from again. Like Banquo's ghost he refuses to stay extinguished. And what do you suppose he wants? Another extension of time in which to produce the money to pay for the A. N. and S. railroad. And did he get it? He did.

A three days, extension of time was granted the Shaw syndicate by Judge O. D. Wheeler Tuesday, and he gave them until Friday to "come across" with the coin. Also the order made by him provides that the the date of the first publication of the notice of the re-sale of the road, in case Shaw does not "come across", will be on June 22 instead of the 20th as at first provided. The date of the sale, however, remains the same, June 29th.

Shaw Wires From Brussels

Shaw seemed ta have disappeared for awhile and nobody could get in touch with him, not even the creditors of the road. Shaw wired from Brussels however tnat he would have the money ready by Thursday. According to Attorney J. J. Hess there has been some difficulty in getting the bonds from the London bankers to the "Brussels syndicate," which is to take the bonds. Mr. Hess says that everything is all right now, however; a delay on the part of the London & Southwestern bank being the only hitch.

Crediters of the road are impatient over the numerous postponements, and they claim the road is deteriorating. They object to keeping up forever the game of extending the time for final payment of the purchase price.

WILL OPEN SOON

The Ingman Hotel, which was badly damaged by fire a few months ago, has since been undergoing a complete change and remodeling, is now almost to completion and will soon be running again. Mr. Ingman has spared nothing which was for the betterment of his hotel. A great change has been made in all the rooms. There are twenty rooms in all, the ceilings have all been raised, more windows added, the walls have all been frescoed in dainty and tasteful colors. It has been so arranged that there are no inside rooms, all have windows and good ventilation. The office and parlor are both roomy, pleasant rooms with an open stair way coming down in the office.

The lighting system is strictly up-to date and the large porch on two sides of the building makes it very attractive.

Mr. Ingman's old customers are eagerly waiting for him to again open for business and already some are occupying the rooms. When finishsing the Ingman Hotel will be about the best in this part of the state.
